

I always find it rather incredible to travel to different parts of the world and experience the passion and creativity of LEGO® builders in many different lands. Whether in Spain or in Taiwan, there are people who are sharing an energy and passion for making amazing things with LEGO® bricks and making new creations as well as discussing the creations that the LEGO® Group is putting on the market. I have often felt that engaging with such people is like a car manufacturer meeting a race car driver. There is nobody who better understands the 'car' and can better push it to its limits.

It gives me energy, inspiration and satisfaction.

When HispaBrick Magazine® started coming out I had such an experience again. I was amazed it was possible to make a magazine to cover this audience. Since then I consider myself lucky to have enjoyed 29 issues of this inspiring magazine. Congratulations on the ten years and I wish the editor, all contributors and readers around the world all the best in the future with their LEGO® passion.
